

Linda Carty is a professor in and former chair of the Department of African American Studies at Syracuse University. She is a long standing labor activist in NY, and HIV/AIDS activist in Caribbean and Latin American health networks in New York City. Her research areas are in antiracism, Black feminisms, and Marxism critically addressing Black women's labor in the Americas and Black women's health care in the US and the Caribbean. Her publications include Unsettling Relations (1991), And Still we Rise (1993) and We're Rooted Here and they Can't Pull us Up (1994). She has two forthcoming articles, What's Going On?: Caribbean Women's HIV Status in Brooklyn, NY, in The Dubois Review and Mapping Transnational Feminist Engagements: Neoliberalism and the Politics of Solidarity with Chandra Mohanty in The Oxford Handbook of Transnational Feminist Movements.